

FUTURE OF WORK

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

The work experience has changed for people everywhere, so what does the future of work look like? It's increasingly hybrid. It's flexible and supportive. It's technology enabled and it unlocks human ingenuity and the ability to be productive anywhere. Accenture surveyed more than 9,000 workers globally to understand what they need to be successful.

What drives productivity and wellness for people varies depending on where they work. We learnt that many people want a hybrid model. People want to be onsite to have easier access to technology, to collaborate with colleagues, and to benefit from consistent routines. People want to be remote to feel safer, enjoy a better quality of life, and have the freedom to take productive breaks.

But to enable this, leaders must redesign work to benefit all types of people. So what can employers do to help workers be productive anywhere? Give people autonomy and freedom. Enable them to learn future skills. Reimagine roles and structures through modern HR practices, and care for their holistic wellbeing. Welcome to the future of work. It's about people being productive anywhere and it begins today.
