Evolution of ServiceOps with BMC
Helix

Context and client challenges

- Business performance is inextricably linked to IT performance, and significant challenges for IT are emerging.
- Increasingly demanding service level agreements, the complexity of hybrid business services, and the strain on IT operations teams to maintain service quality all contribute to this pressure.

New approach and solution

- Generative AI signifies the next evolution of ServiceOps. The ability to use corporate know-how to facilitate troubleshooting, or to quickly identify the right actions to resolve or even prevent faults, is the key challenge in optimizing operational services.
- With BMC HelixGPT we can empower the customer operation services by providing a platform capable of learning from company know-how and leveraging LLM to assist operational teams.

Client benefits

- Incident Prediction/resolution: Helix will support Operation team to predict or solve infra/application incident providing the resolution steps required to anticipate the problem.
- Operation Virtual Agent: Beyond troubleshooting, Helix GPT assists operators through a Virtual Agent capable of searching for any information within the company's knowledge base.
- Multi-Alert Intelligent Management: In case of multiple alerts, connected to a single and real incident, Helix will support Ops team analysing the alerts and pointing out the only real one.
- Compliant: allowing SaaS and Onprem solutions
